In describing a fight a witness said the defendant threw a rock and missed the plaintiff. He then threw another and hit the plaintiff right where he missed him the first time.—Exchange.

A queer request.

Of the many freak communications which reach the capitol and the departments one that come to the house just before it adjourned is deserving of the proverbial biscuit. The letter was addressed to "The Congress of the United States at Washington Assembled," and came from a resident of a small settlement in northeastern Texas. It was written in an entirely earnest spirit. It said:

Dear Mister Congressman:
My dear wife Amanda has just been blest by the appearance of a healthy young boy. Me and my wife can't agree on no name to give the boy and we want you to help us out. I wants him called Dave and she wants him called Cy, but she wont give in neither will I. Now what we want you to do is to have a document passed through your body giving him a handle. Please attend to the matter as soon as possible. Yours,

The only person around the house to whom the letter could have gone through the regular system of disseminating of the miscellaneous mail was the private secretary of Congressman Bailey. He communicated the contents of the letter to a number of employees around the house. The other afternoon the secretary sent out a number of typewritten letters to a dozen or more employees, enjoining them to meet in one of the committee rooms.

When the clerks assembled, he proposed that they, as a substitute house of representative in committee of the whole should attend to the very urgent communication which he had received, and that a suitable name should be selected for the growing young Texan. Accordingly a set of resolutions, sticklers in their form and precision, were drafted, with seal attached and signature properly fixed, and sent to the writer. They informed the Texan that the congress had taken cognizance of his communication, and had acted accordingly. The congress exercising a power vested in it by the law of 1894," said resolutions, "hereby designates, denominates, titles and names your offspring after three distinguished scions of the Lone Star. Let it be known that his name shall be Bailey Chilton Mills —,"—Washington Post.

A new variety of bean grown in Danville Ind., has pods from twenty-eight to thirty-eight inches long. This is probably the variety widely known to fame in the story of "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Some men succeed by ability; others rely on whiskers.

When most girls get to talking about affinity, what they really want is a man.

In youth we believe more than we know; in old age we know more than we believe.

Every body is conceited, only some folks can act as if they weren't better than others.

Lots of men marry women because they are too tender hearted to hurt their feelings.

If some girls had their wedding outfit burned up the day before, they wouldn't see any thing to get married for.

When a girl sees a man looking to see how long her bicycle skirt is, I wonder why she always puts up her hands to fix her hair.

When a girl tries on her brother's trousers she can never understand how he can go around that way without being awfully ashamed.

A woman will generally forgive her husband for coming in late unless he manages to get into the bed so quietly that he doesn't wake her up.

Whenever a girl is out walking with a man and they pass a poor little cripple boy, she always tries to put a pained, grieved expression into her eyes.

When a girl has definitely made up her mind to a particular man, she begins to insinuate to him that she has always felt sure she would break under a great grief.

The ministers ought to tell the women that playing on the heavenly harps and wearing the golden crowns is just as pleasant as trying a new love song on the piano and wearing a new Easter bonnet at the same time.—New York Press.

The fools are not all dead. One borrowed a newspaper the other day, and discovered an advertisement headed; "How to Make Pants Last." He sent fifty cents for instructions and in due time received the following, "make the coat and vest first." At last accounts the simpleton was trying to recover his money by legal proceedings.—Press and Printer.

Every body looks after (?) the printer: If a newspaper man goes into a store he buys goods like others. When he wants a new shirt he does not go from store to store taking bids. He never thinks of asking the grocer to put in another pound of sugar for a dollar. He is always expected to contribute liberally to home enterprises or public entertainments; but when there is a one dollar job of printing he is asked to bid. These are facts and there is nothing remarkable about it only that the printers are such blooming fools to allow it.—Pantagraph.

An Illinois paper had it heralded "D. m a wife deserter," and lost several subscribers who objected to profanity in print. But the caption only referred to Charles Dam, who skipped out and left Mrs. Dam and the Dam kids to hustle for themselves.—Ex

With this issue of the TIMES we turn the paper and Job office over to Mr. Claude P. McIntosh who will continue its publication as heretofore. Owing to so much other business which we have to attend to, we find it most impossible to publish the paper and give it the attention it should have, so we have leased the plant to Mr. McIntosh.

We extend our thanks to the good people of Spoutspring who have so generously supported the paper from the beginning. The paper together with the job outfit is now paying its way, and is one of the foremost in all Eastern Kentucky. For all of this we owe our enterprising neighbors who have so greatly appreciated our establishing a newspaper at this place.

Notwithstanding there is no other paper published in the county, we have never received but $13 from the county or any of its officials for Job work. The Fiscal court has never had the county claims list published as the law requires, but our little county clerk without the authority from court had about two thousand copies of the list of claims printed on posters at a cost of $10, and this printing was done in Richmond. But a few weeks ago Mr. Vaughn had a job of printing done for the County at Jackson at an expense of $50. This job we would like to have had and were entitled to it. We have always solicited the county work and agreed to do it for as small amount as any one, but still we have done but one small job for the county. Despite all the drawbacks and adversities the TIMES has prospered and grown and, through the continued support of our patrons, will grow on and prosper.

With much regret we sever our connection with the TIMES, but will still do all we can to make the paper the best ever published in Estill county, and trust, and believe the people of this village and surrounding territory will give Mr. McIntosh the same support they have given us and we are sure it will do as we have tried to do, much for the people it represents.

We will ever be a well-wisher of the TIMES and its many readers.

J. E. BURGHER, JR.

SALUTATORY.

Having leased the TIMES plant, we, with this issue, assume the duties of editor and publisher, and as this is our first venture in the journalistic field, we ask our readers to bear with us in all errors that we may make, though we shall endeavor to make as few as possible.

Our aim will be to make the TIMES a live wide-awake paper as it has been under the management of its former editor, Mr. Burgher.

Our motto will ever be: A home made paper in the interest of the county. Estill county is not so poor that she can not support a county paper, and we ask the citizens of the county to give us a liberal patronage so as to enable us to publish a paper that will be an honor to the county.

We do not expect to dabble in politics, but will commend the right and denounce the wrongs of all parties.

Hoping to receive a liberal share of your patronage, we are your humble servant,

Claude P. McIntosh.
